1. Introduction

The career development and employment guidance education for college students is an educational practice carried out to better help universities to develop self-recognition, comprehensively understand the society, choose professional roles scientifically, improve their own abilities and enhance social competitiveness.[1] In terms of current social needs, contemporary college students need not only professional knowledge and skills, but also a sound personality and high ideological quality. Ideological and political education plays an important role and positive influence in helping college students’ career development and employment guidance.[2] It is self-evident that through ideological and political education to shape students' thinking, so as to help them to better carry out career development planning and smooth employment.

2. Analysis on the Problems of College Students' Career Development and Employment Guidance

2.1 Mismatch Between Supply and Demand of Career Guidance Courses

College students' satisfaction with employment courses is low, most of them think that career guidance courses are boring and less helpful to employment. The focus of employment guidance courses in colleges is mostly limited to solving the specific problems encountered in the employment of college students, but neglects to help students build a correct view of employment, career choice and development concept. At present, career guidance courses and career development courses are separated from each other.[3] Most career development courses are set as elective courses, which fail to combine career development and career guidance organically, and it is difficult to give full play to the complementary role of the two.

2.2 "Fragmentation" of Employment Information Release.

The comprehensive service platform of employment guidance needs to be integrated and optimized. In China, the statistical processing and trend prediction of college students' employment information are relatively lacking, the number of recruitment information collection is insufficient, and the form of release is single. At present, college students mainly understand the employment policy and recruitment information through the school employment information network, the introduction of teachers, relatives and friends, and the news media. The channels for obtaining information are relatively scattered, which consumes a lot of manpower and material resources.

2.3 Lack of Professional Guidance Personnel

Most of the professional development and employment guidance team of college students are young teachers who have just entered the school and are engaged in student work. They have less experience in ideological and political education and lack of experience in innovation and entrepreneurship and practical guidance for employment. On the one hand, the existing courses for career development and employment guidance for college students are mainly set at the level of theoretical knowledge, and teachers give more theoretical guidance than practical guidance when teaching students. [4] However, in the actual process of job selection and employment, pure theoretical teaching can not solve the outstanding problems in the process of job selection and employment of college graduates. On the other hand, the existing career development and employment guidance for college students focuses on the tools and means as well as the professional consultation process to provide consultation and guidance services. There are more professional guidance and employment services, but not enough connection with ideological and political education.

2.4 Uncomprehensive Employment Quality Evaluation and the Evaluation System

At present, the evaluation of the employment quality of colleges is still focused on the level of static evaluation indicators such as employment rate, employment satisfaction and salary satisfaction, ignoring the evaluation of the subsequent career development of college students, which is the dynamic level evaluation indicator, namely the post-evaluation of the employment quality. This kind of planar dimension evaluation based only on static indicators is not comprehensive enough and ignores the important role of vocational development education for the future growth of college students.

Through cordial interaction, students can improve their learning effect, employment knowledge, job-hunting skills, and ability of independent career development, so as to effectively improve their employment competitiveness.

Fourth, outstanding alumni are invited to share their successful employment experience or set up a "micro-class" for career development and career guidance, so as to help students have a clearer understanding of future industries and careers. Five is to use the platform to carry out the dynamic investigation, scientific statistics and analysis of large data of employment, based on comprehensive information service platform, and establish and improve the employment statistics and feedback mechanism of colleges and universities, from the industry demand, employment rate and employment quality, satisfaction, and many other dimensions of feedback, through employment level responding to the university admission and training effect, In this way, the organic linkage and scientific interaction of college students' enrollment, training and employment can be realized, and the employment and career development of college students can be systematically promoted.

3.3 The Establishment of a Refined Employment Guidance System

First, according to the national and industrial development requirements, combined with the training process of college students and the needs of students to provide unit internship, professional practice, special training, employment consulting, personalized counseling and other full range of employment services. Second, according to the employment situation, employment market demand and changes in students' characteristics, we should timely adjust the normal employment orientation, update the work content, innovate methods and methods, and improve the employment effect. The third is to help students understand the employment situation, the latest national policies and guidance, industry development trend, market demand for talents, enterprise employment standards and other relevant information, the interpretation and analysis of these information, so that students can have a more comprehensive and correct understanding of the employment related situation from the macro and micro. Thus the employment and future career development has a relatively scientific and reasonable forecast. Fourthly, according to the personalized needs of college students, combined with the professional career assessment system, personalized consultation and guidance can be carried out to help college students correctly understand their working ability, values and advantages and disadvantages, so as to better formulate the career development plan and employment plan suitable for individual development. Fifth, we should give point-to-point assistance to the graduates with difficulties, find out the specific reasons for the difficulties, unswervingly implement the concept of accurate assistance, and realize the dynamic management of "one policy in one's life".

3.4 The Improvement of the Personnel Guarantee Mechanism for College Students' Career Development and Employment Guidance

One is to set up the College Student Career Development and Employment Guidance Studio, and formulate corresponding policies and systems to ensure the normal operation of the studio, including facilities, facilities, venues, financial support, etc. Second is to establish the professional quality and expert level of professional employment guidance team. Team members should have professional background in human resources, psychology, management, education and other related fields, and have good teaching ability, counseling ability and career guidance related work experience. Third, relying on the studio and professional team, to carry out systematic and professional consultation and guidance for the career development and employment of college students. The fourth is to pay attention to the training of the professional ability of the talent team through the development of industrial structure and talent matching, human resources demand and gap, social productivity, total output growth, social income and other indicators of evaluation. The post-employment quality evaluation system provides a directional reference for the top-level design of the university education development plan, a realistic reference for talent cultivation and teaching reform, and a new development direction and focus for the employment work, that is, to build a comprehensive education service system integrating career development education and employment guidance.

4. Conclusion

In addition, colleges should establish a dynamic evaluation and feedback mechanism to continuously track and evaluate the effect of employment guidance, establish reasonable evaluation standards and evaluation system, and timely feedback the evaluation results to relevant departments, so as to timely adjust and improve the relevant work, and comprehensively promote the career development and employment of college students.
